Family dramas in Turin Film Festival

Moretti had not hidden his intention to make a festival based on more private and less on politics. That is a series of films, all focusing on the theme of mourning family presented in recent days (Demain, quemar las naves, Bitter and Twisted).

The loss, however, not only declines in the sense of "death", but also the real "disappearance" of people care. And 'the case of Belgian Unspoken (Non-dit) of Fien Troch. In the film, a pair of parents loses his daughter Lisa, disappeared without trace. Five years later, the two will not give peace, even if the world goes on, the father, Lukas, answers the phone, imagining that the other side there is his daughter, his mother, Grace, believed to see on the street.

The director uses many close-ups, to scrutinize the faces of the characters closely, and steal all their emotion. "I told a pain that does not end," he says, "but continues: intimate, not espresso, incomprehensible to those who observe from outside."
